When COVID was on the horizon, we knew that more people would struggle in 2020 than ever before, not just with illness, but also job loss, anxiety, and all the uncertainties that come with a crisis. We knew the shelter system needed a larger facility to increase space between guests. With your help, we advocated for a large-scale emergency shelter so that everyone had safe shelter. We are thankful to you, our community, and our city for making that happen.

With your help, we've taken this opportunity to transition, to give specialized care to our most vulnerable neighbors: the elderly and medically fragile guests.

With the support you give, the results of this transition have been nothing short of spectacular. We now provide 72 beds, which keeps our guests safely socially distanced. With fewer guests, our staff can give each one of them more personalized care. The shelter is now decongested and much more spacious.

For nearly 40 years,

1982

Brother Dave and Brother Bob open warming center on 2nd Ave called Brother Francis Shelter. Only allowed to have 40 guests at a time, but frequently have 150. No beds.

Anchorage fire marshal shuts down Brother Francis Shelter over fire risk. Brother Dave and Brother Bob organize sleep-out in Delaney Park to point out lack of homeless services. Mayor Tony Knowles agrees to create permanent shelter as public-private partnership between Anchorage and CSS.

1983

Brother Francis Shelter opens on 3rd Ave, a converted building with 100 beds where guests can eat, sleep, work with case managers, and receive treatment from the volunteer-run health clinic.

CSS opens the current BFS building with 240 beds, provides guest access to laundry, shower, computer lab, and more robust case management and health clinic services.

Oct 1983

Due to increased need during winter months, BFS contracts Bean's Café to provide more than 100 extra beds. Together, they shelter more than 300 guests per night.

2004

BFS improves case management with methods like critical time intervention and trauma-informed care.

2012

BFS partners with the Healthcare and Homelessness group to improve health clinic, providing better, more consistent service. The group also helps launch the Medical Respite program.

2015

BFS opens the current BFS building with 240 beds, provides guest access to laundry, shower, computer lab, and more robust case management and health clinic services.

2017

BFS reduces capacity to 72 beds and focuses on caring for elderly and medically fragile guests who cannot climb the stairs at the Sullivan Arena.

YOU’ve helped us grow and change.

Since the first Brother Francis Shelter opened in 1982, you’ve helped us grow and adapt to Anchorage’s changing needs. From a small warming center to the largest shelter in the state to a specialized, health-focused shelter-clinic hybrid, you, our community, have enabled us to be what Anchorage needs us to be. The tens of thousands of people we’ve served would never have gotten that help without your constant support.

BELOW: Anchorage community members and guests of BFS joined the sleepout in Delaney Park, calling attention to the city’s lack of homelessness services.

BELOW: Our partnership with the Healthcare and Homelessness group enabled us to keep our Caring Clinic permanently staffed, so guests can always have access to the help they need.

In Medical Respite, people who’ve recently been discharged from the hospital after surgery or illness have a safe place to rest and recover, giving their bodies the time they need to properly heal. Not only does Medical Respite provide a place for these guests to recover, it also helps local hospitals and the municipal budget. When someone has the chance to recover safely and completely from an injury, they are far less likely to re-injure themselves and need another expensive stay in the hospital. With our 10 Medical Respite beds and your generous support, we save the city over 1.5 million dollars per year.

The Medical Respite program also gives staff the opportunity to build personal, nurturing relationships with guests. We’ve begun our First Fridays program, where medical professionals talk to guests about relevant health issues. Each month, the staff also host a Wellness Wednesday where they host exercises and other wellness activities. Volunteers are also building relationships with guests in Medical Respite. Nick Bachman from Anchorage Community Land Trust is volunteering with Medical Respite and shared his agricultural knowledge to move the Medical Respite garden indoors with basil, thyme, oregano, and chamomile plants. Sharing activities provides an opportunity for guests to build social and emotional support systems. “You start with planting, and soon people are talking about foods, families, jobs, other stories,” Nick said. Guests continue to care for the herb garden: “Guests have been taking pride in it. They’re watering and tending the plants. And sometimes things die, and that’s okay. We just start over and try again.” Without your support, none of this would be possible. Thanks to you, patient-guests are creating the foundation to permanent stability through wellness and recovery.

“Every woman deserves to know what’s going on within her body mentally, physically, and emotionally. I’m glad that I was able to help the women at the shelter feel that empowerment so that small health issues don’t become long term conditions.”
- Emily Cornish Haury, RN speaker at First Friday

Brother Francis Shelter is a calmer, quieter space to be in. Guests spend their days talking with case managers and staff, creating a plan to permanent stability. Guests also spend time recovering from past traumas, reading and doing puzzles building a strong foundation for permanent stability.

This new environment, made possible by your constant support, even gives us space for community events like a Christmas party and community talent show, where guests cheered each other on as they performed. This past year of the pandemic has been hard on everyone, but it’s also given us a new vision for the future of shelter care. Seeing the incredible impact that our less crowded shelter has had on our guests and staff, the compassionate, individualized care we can offer, we believe that this model is the way of the future. With your help, we will continue to learn and grow.
THANK YOU, PROVIDENCE HOSPITAL!

On behalf of Providence Hospital, Kirsten Schultz, CSS Board Member, donated a box of pedometers to Brother Francis Shelter to encourage physical health!

THANK YOU, SOUTHCENTRAL FOUNDATION!

Southcentral Foundation worked on-site at BFS to give COVID vaccinations to BFS guests and staff!

Thanks to them, guests like Benjamin will stay safer and healthier.

Hope Endures. So can your giving.

When you give to the Brother Francis Shelter Endowment fund beyond your regular giving, you create hope that will sustain the shelter for years to come. Since what you give grows, your gift sustains the mission of Brother Francis Shelter as a permanent source of support. Whether it’s $25 or $25,000 your investment makes a real difference and builds permanency that will benefit the lives of our shelter guests now, and in the future.
